Lohmann Animal Health International
Establishes National Distribution Center
Names Coordinators

Winslow, Maine (Dec. 2, 2005) — Lohmann Animal Health International (LAHI) has established a National Distribution Center for servicing clients in the United States.

The new center located in Vineland, N.J., is supported by national customer service and shipping technicians specializing in U.S. avian vaccine needs. This assures LAHI customers in the USA will receive the same personal attention as they have in the past.

Paula Vick, LAHI customer service supervisor, coordinates all domestic, NAFTA and international orders. She also conducts data analysis of the production plan and forecast for use in allocations and order fulfillment. Vick is responsible for coordination of restock orders for domestic shipments.

Wendy Miller-Hackett has been named domestic orders coordinator. Miller-Hackett receives, organizes and expedites all domestic orders including autogenous orders, working with logistics to ensure timely delivery. She also assists with trade show events.

Tammy Long has been named domestic logistics coordinator. In her new role, Long manages inventory and delivery to all customers in the USA, distributes marketing materials to vendors and potential clients, and assists with trade show events.

"We are constantly striving to improve our reliability and efficiency," said Dave Zacek, LAHI president. "This change provides access to LAHI's full inventory since the National Distribution Center is located at the same site as our Global Distribution Center."

The state-of-the art facility features a new walk-in cooler system for storing LAHI vaccines.

Based in Winslow, Maine, LAHI is a member of the PHW Group, which comprises 30 companies that produce avian vaccines and poultry for the global market.
